their party's support for a peace pact be contingent upon government adoption of their autonomy position paper. The recently adopted paper largely parallels the Allon Plan, and demands full Israeli control in the Jordan Valley, the Etzion Bloc and the southern Gaza Strip.

A National Religioue Party autonomy committee meeting con-ciuded yesterday with a demand for a government decision on the issue. Two draft position papers were put before the committee, both of which etress that autonomy must apply only to people and not to territories. The more moderate of the two was drafted by Hammer and NRP Kneeset faction chairman Dr. issues Yehuda Ben-Meir; the other was presented by party firebrand Rabbi

Jerusalem Post Correspondent The Israel cabinet was meeting in extraordinary cession last night to consider the latest U.S. proposals designed to resolve the final issues of an Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty, including the timing of the exchange of ambassadors and a U.S. guarantee involving the future supply of Sinai oil to Israel.

Will Peres today mention 'just rights of Palestinians'?

By SABAR HONIG Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. - Labour Party chairman Shimon Peres' reported intention to use the phrase "the just rights of the Palestinians" in his Knesset speech today has touched off a controversy, within the party.

According to the reports, Peres will use the phrase while asking for a territorial compromise, stressing that Palestinian rights will be realized within the framework of a eingle Jordanian-Palestinian entity to the east of Israei.

While Labour bawks yesterday demanded that Peres drop the phrase, others eald that it is not certain that he will actually resort to it. If he does, they said, he will not be creating a precedent. Similar ex-pressions appear in the English version of the Camp David accords, and the "Vienna Document" approved by the Labour Party Bureau last year speake "of the just interests of the Palestinians."

The Israel pound was devalued by .8 per cent last week against most foreign currencies. The Bank of Israel has apparently decided to stop the process of revaluation that has injured Israeli exports in recent months, and ecems to have intervened more actively in currency markets.

The U.S. dollar exchange rate yesterday broke the IL20 barrier, and banknotes were sold in some banks for IL20 to the dollar. In the next few days, a further devaluation of the Israel pound can be expected. In the next few daye, the new European Monetary System will come into force in Europe. Officials accompanying the presi-dent were clearly hoping that the cabinet would go along with these latest ideas, thereby cetting the etage for a ceremonial Ieraeli-Egyptian initialling of a peace treaty later this week.

The president believes that now is the "moment of truth" in the negotiations. "It'e now or never," a reliable source said. The president does not want to return to Wasbington empty-banded. to believo that Egypt will accept this compromise, bave assured Israel tbat Egypt will ostablisb full diplomatic rolations with Israel moaning an embasey, led by a charge d'affaires rather than an amhassador - immediately upon completion of the interim withdrawal.

According to U.S. and Egyptian officials, "full diplomatic relations," as stipulated in the Camp Devid agreements, does not necessarily mean exchanging ambassadors. The Americans believe Israel can live with this compromise proposal, and were hoping yesterday that the cabinet would endorso it.

The cabinet was considering Carter's latest assurances that the U.S. will be generous in helping to meet the financial burden of establishing e new military defence line in the Negev following the Sinai withdrawal. Israel Is eecking $3 billion to pay for the construction of two Negev airbases and the new defence line.

Carter has encouraged Israel to helleve that this matter will be resolved "satisfactorily."

In addition, there are indications that the Pantagon will cootinue to meet Israel's defence requests. Tho Israel cabinet wanted to receive hilateral assurances on these matters in advance of the conclusion of the treaty negotiations.

The U.S.-sponsored language in the proposed "agreed minutes" at-tached to the two controvsrsial clauses in Article 6 - at Israel's request, the attached document is no longer called an "interpretative note." for unexplained reasons was accepted by Begin and tho Israel cabinet last week.

During Carter's talks with Sadat some counter-proposals were raised and brought to Israel. It seems, however, that Israel has remained firm on these points. The Americana now hope that Egypt will reconsider its stancs Officlale who have read the "agreed minutes" eay that the language is dsliberately amhiguous and can meet Egypt's minimal reguirements.

The controversy in Article 6 (ii) centres around the relationship hetween ths treaty and a comprehensive settlsment. Article 6 (v) involvss the relationship between the treaty and Egypt's earlier mutual defence agreements with other Arah states.

Israel is trying to make certain that the treaty "stands on its own," while the Egyptians want it clear that the pact is a first step towards a comprehensive agreement and that its earlier accords are not affscted by the treaty.

U.S. legislators favour mission

Jerusalem Post Correspondent WASHINGTON. - Three Democratic senators and a Republican congrossman, whose views on Middle East issues are normally divergent, all expressed support for President Jimmy Carter's current Middle East peace mission and for the principle of U.S. military presence in the region. All four legislators appeared on network TV interview chows vesterday.

Senator George McGovoro of South Dakota told CBS interviewere on "Face the Nation" that Carter's mission was justified even if it proved unsuccessful

Washington's Senator Henry Jackson, however, said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" that he supported U.S. bases in Sinai. Jackson proposed that Israel and Egypt he riven the means and responsibility for defence of Persian Gulf oilfields, with direct American intervention only "a last resort."

Senator Richard Stone of Florida, a strong supportsr of Israol, and Representative Paul Findley of Illinois, who has maintained close contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization, were interviewed together on NBC's "Meet the Press." Stone expressed support for Carter's efforts and underlined the importance of opposing the Soviet threat. He opposed establishment of a Palestinian state.

Findley, on the other hand, revealed that PLO spokesman Mahmud Labadi reaffirmed to him on Saturday what chairman Yasser Arafat had told the congressman last December: When a Palestinian state is established in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, it will not try to expand by force

Jerusalem Post Correspondent after he left the Friday night meal at Blair House where he had been Premier Menahem Begin'e Sabbath guest. The president told his inner circle of aides about his plan on Saturday morning, but informed Begin only on Sunday morning. Martin Schram, the "Weshington Post" correspondent currently ac-companying the U.S. president on hie Middle East peace mission, yeeterday wrote that initially only presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan supported the idea. White House spokesman Jody Powell was the most vocal opponent. But reservations were also expressed by the other members of the "inner circle" - Vice-Precident Walter Mondale, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and national security adviser Zblgniew Brzezinskl. "Ham, like the president, felt instinctively in his guts that it was the right thing to do," one of the advissrs was quoted as saying.

The chief concern expressed was that Carter's mission would end in failure with catastrophic results, due to the president having created a "make or break" situation which would rapidly go downhill to a point of no return. Carter replied that "the negotiations were at thie point anyway." The other serious worry was that, if an agreement wes not achleved, "Carter could suffer severe political damage at home." The president claimed that "the personal damage would he there whether he went to the Middle East or just sat et home while the Camp

David framework fell apart." "The Washington Post" reported that, on that same Friday morning, at the second meeting betwoon Carter and Begin, the preeldent felt that Begin's stancs in regard to the supply of Sinai oil was hardening. "Begin had even taken to lecturing Carter ono more time about the Holocaust. That infurlated the American president.

On Sunday, whon Carter precented the new Amsrican proposals to Begin, he hopod the premior would rcply immediately, Begin, however, told him he could agree to only one of the proposals on the spot and would have to refer the two others back to his cahinet. Carter commonted that at Camp David the prime minister had taken much more important decisions on his own without having to convenc his government. To this Begin reportedly responded, "I've got five generals in this cehinet and they are used to giving orders, not taking them."

Not to be outdone, Carter, in a reference to the Congress, quipped, "I've got 15 guys up there who think they ehould be precident and another 15 guye who think they will be president."

The two leeders prepared to for-mulate a joint stetement about the turning point in the negotiations. Begin wanted to state that the issues were serious and would be referred to the members of the cabinet, but instead eaid, "The issues will be referred to the serious members of the cahinet." This slip of the tongue cauced hoth men to buret out laughing, and it was in this mood thet the prime minister left the White Houss for Blair House.

Afterwards, Schram wrote. Carter decided to send the new proposals to President Anwar Sadat in Cairo, 'and he carefully eelected hie emissary: Brzezinski, who is viewed with suspicion by the Israelis and therefore was helieved to be a good choice to send to talk to Sedat."

He then took two or three paces backward. When he returned to his place, be jerked his head suddenly. as if to crase the momentary nightmare he had experienced of the horror of the Holocaust.

President and Mrs. Carter and their party, accompanied by Prime Minister and Mrs. Begin, were received at the entrance to Xad Vashem at 9:05 by MK Gldenn Hausner, chairman of the Yad Vashem Council, and officials of the Remembrance Authority.

In the Hall of Names, Hausner showed the president a sample "page of testimony," and explained the system whereby over two million such pages have been recorded, each giving blographical details of Jews who died in the Holocaust.

In response to a question by the president. Hausner said that in Western Europe the Nazis did keep records of the Jews they sent to slaughter, but in Eastern Europe they did not record names, only numbers.

Mrs. Carter, who was accompanied to the absorption centre by Aliza Begin and the wives of American officials, seemed to need no briefing on the upcoming Purim holiday and its connection with the historical episode of the Jewe in an eient Persia that is recounted in the Bible. Though at first quiet and reticent. the first lady was vielbiy charmed by the sight of masked and eostumed youngsters - all new im-migrants - who were "rebearsing" for their first Purim in Israel.

Greeted by more songs in the eentre's lecture hall, Mrs. Carter spon-taneously joined a circle of dancing adults. As security guards looked on in amusement, she was twirled into a kind of waltz with Shlomo Friedman, an elderly but peppy immigrant from Russia, who eucceeded in plan-ting kisses on both her ebeeks. Eliezer Kroll, the New York-born

"We were struck by bow small this country really is, with the borders so close." said Erika Zeisel, who came on aliya from Boston last year with ber busband Ya'akov. She is now working with brain-damaged children in Jerusalsm.

"We are grateful to Prssident Carter for his peace efforts, but we're feeling very trightened that. given the size of the country, Israel may be forced to give up land without a firm commitment by the other side to peace," she continued.

gas depot Jerusalem Post Reporter

A gas balloon exploded at a butane gas depot on Jerusalem'e Hebron Road yesterday morning. There were no injuries.

The depot is less than a kilometre from St. Andrew's Church, where U.S. President Jimmy Carter later attended a service. Pollcs, on high alert for the American president'a visit, were on the seene within minutes. They soon established that the explosion was the result of an industrial accident.

The gas depot where the accident occurred was the target of a terrorist bomb last summer, when an American born bomb disposal expert, Stevs Hilmes, was fatally wounded as he approached the device to dismantle it. At the time it was reported that the depot, in the beart of a residential area and managed by three gas com-panles, had been operating without a licence because the city engineer'e department, the police and local eivil defence command considered it to be a hazard.

Smith expected to sweep white seats in Rhodesia

SALISBURY (Reuter). - Premier Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front Party yesterday appeared certain to sweep unopposed into all 28 white seats in the black-dominated first parliament of Zimbabwe Rhodesis.

All the other major political psrties, hlack and white, have dectdod not to contest the guaranteed white seats in the parliament to follow the one-man, one-vote elections next month.

One or two independents could still stand, hut with today's dsadline for nominations, this appeared unlikely. The Rhodesian Front only needed more than 22 seats in the 100-seat house of assembly to be in a strong position in the new country.

It would have effective power of veto on any changes to the 1979 ma-jority rule constitution, which provides for continued day-to-day white control of the security forces, judiciary and civil cervice. Such changes require 78 parllamentary votes in favour.

The way was finally cleared for a Rhodesian Front walkover Saturday night when the United African

Lord Killanin, president of the. International Olympic Committee, announced the hreakthrough following a meeting on Saturday with a five-man.Peking delegation at IOC

headquarters. The meeting, scheduled for Lausanne sometime during the next three weeks, would be the first time the two Chinese governments have been represented at bead-to-bead talks across a negotiating table, according to diplomats. The IOC is the only national organization which reasonable to the Talwanese.

recognizes Talwan and not Peking, whose athletes have not competed in the Olympics since 1948 — before the communist government came to power in Peking.

Killanin'e move to get both sides to round-table talks will remove from the IOC much of the pressure to decide between Peking and Talwan. But although the National Olympic Committee of Talwan told the IOC it would be ready to take part in such direct discuesions," some IOC members doubted that the Taipei government would allow them to do

However, if Talwan now turns down the talks, it will give the IOC the opportunity to recognize Peking without appearing that it is being un-

Twenty white acats will be voted 100,000 died in Khmer Rouge 'living hell'

GENEVA (Reuter). - The Khmer Rouge Communist victory in Cambodia in April 1975 was the start of a living hell in which at least 100,000 citizens died, according to a UN report heing discussed here.

One of the millions of Cambodians forced to vacate cities and undergo forced labour in the countryside by the victorious Communists said of the long march: "We must have passed a body every 200 metres. Most of them had died of gastrointectinal infections which cause complete dehydration."

No city-dweller was spared the evacuation, according tn a Cambodian doctor quoted in the report. "A hospital department for slck children turned into a common grave because nobody. was allowed in to fetch them. The Khmer Rouge expelled the doctors and nurses, and people who had just been operated on died from lack of care," be said. The UN Commission on Human Rights is discussing the report which condenses evidence submitted by the governments of Australia, Britain, Canada, Norway and the U.S.; Amnesty International and the International Commission of Jurists.

During its current session the 32nation commission will be invited to condemn gross and violent violations of human rights in Cambodia, as detailed in the report... But Abdelwahab Bouhdiba of Tunisia, chairman of the group which prepared the report, eald when introducing it that the situation had changed with the overthrow of the Khmer Rouge government of ousted prime minister Pol Pot by Vietnamese-backed forcss, Bouhdiba said the former regime was charged with forcibly removing between three and four million people from clties and putting them to forced labour on the land, often in far-flung areas miles from their original bomee.

In less than four years of rule the Cambodian authorities imposed a drastic code of punishment, curtailing freedom of speech and movement while eystematically eliminating soldiers, intellectuals, students, and all groups identified as opposition, Boundiba said. He added that religious and all other facets of traditional Cambodian life were outlawed. A man named Vim Sot Rongachit

Tel Aviv ASA 'A,' HU in rugby cup showdown

By JACK LEON Past Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The exciting struggie for the National Rugby League championship has been narrowed down to a two-horse race between Tei Aviv ASA "A" and the Hebrew University, as a result of the weekend'e penultimate matches of 4 the 1978/79 eeason.

Title-holders ASA "A" ended the championship hopes of Yizre'ei, with a great 26-10 away win against the kibbutz XV, while the Hebrew University had a rest day. Both var-sity clubs now have 18 points from 11 outings in the seven-team double round-robin competition, with the Tel Aviv team marginally ahead on goal difference.

Yizre'el are in joint third piace with Ha'ngen-Nir Eliahu, each with 16 points. Ha'ogen — who were themseives league leaders less than a month ago - completed their programme in style over the weekend. cruising to a 38-3 away victory over Tel Aviv ASA "B." at the Wingate Institute. The winners' talented ceotre Leon Green led the scoring with 12 points, made up of a try and four conversions.

But Yizre'el do stili have a vital say in the destination of the champlonship, as next Saturday they travel to the Hebrew University, in what is likely to be a very tough final game for the Jerusalemites.

In contrast. ASA "A" should not be too extended in getting the better of Kiryat Shmooa at Wingate. The Upper Galilee guests are in fifth place in the table — ahead of ASA "B" and the Technion — but only have five points from 10 matches.

In the event of ASA "A" and the Hebrew University finisbing the season with the same number of points, they will play off for the title later in the month, Israei Rugby Footbali Union vice-president Alan Brazg toid The Jerusalem Post yesterday. The old varsity rivals shared the first rugby league cham-pionship title in 1972, but the Tei Aviv team was an outright winner in 1975 as well as last year.

Sport c'tee seeks Inflationary UK football fees public's suggestions The advisory committee Education Minister Zevy nampant inflation has hit the Britisb soccer scene and prompted some team managers to call for a ceiling on transfer prices. They say prices now being demanded for players are nut of all proportion tn their real value and are nonsensical at a time when most soccer cidbs claim there is a cash crisis.

Certainly, prices are rising much faster than the country'e inflation rate. Manchester United raised a few eyebrows last year when it paid out £500.000 for Scottisb international defender Gordon McQueen. Yet this season West Bromwich Albion paid £516,000 for a noninternational, David Mills, who has yet to play a full game for the first team. That was followed by the eensational transfer of Trevor Francis for more than fim. to Nottingham Forest.

Now Second Division West Ham bas forked out £530,000 for Pbil Parkes, rated England's fourth-best goalkeeper, as the club attempts to climb back into the First Division. With a limited supply of top-class players being chased by ambitious clubs, more transfers at such inflated prices are bound to foliow.

At the same time only a handful of England's 92 League clubs have invested in any form of pitch protection, such as underground heating or hot-air eystems, and have been caught out by the worst winter for years. Most systems cost only a fraction of the money now being pald for players of doubtful class but investments in ground and pitch lmprovements are, unlike player transfers, not eligible for tax relief. Until they are, transfer fees will continue to epiral while pitches and grounds are neglected. One result is that managers will increasingly look for new players abroad, particularly in Latin America, where class players can still be bought for a fraction of their European counterparts.

Bantam champ back with knockout

LOS ANGELES (Reuter). - Carlos Zarate of Mexico made a successful comeback Sunday night, koocking out Mensa Kpalogo of Togo, in the third round of a scheduled 15-round bout to retain his World Boxing. Councli bantamweight champlonship.

The fight was Zarate's first since he was knocked out on October 28 by Wilfredo Gomez of Puerto Rico, the only loss in Zarate's career. The champion, however, bad little trouble with Kpalogo as he con-trolled the fight from start to finish.

The victory, Zarate's ninth successful defence of the crown that he won in May 1976, boosted his career record to 54 wins against one loss. It was the 53rd knockout for the bard-bitting Mexican.

The fight was in jeopardy earlier today when Zarate weigbed in at half a kilo over the bantamweight limit of 50 kg. But the champion was able to shed the weight to allow the fight to go on.

The added work did not seem to bother the 26-year-old champion. He was the aggressor from the opening bell, concentratiog on the challenger'e body in the first round, throwing powerful lefts to Kpalogo's stomach. The end came suddenly with lese than 30 seconds to go in the third round. Zarate, who was continuing to attack the body, suddenly connected with a right-left combination to Kpalogo's bead, sending him to the canvas. The challenger, on his knees Ed Kania of Darimouth at montb'e national AAD and cradling his head on the deck, never made an attempt to rise as referee Terry Smlth counted him out.

Paradise lost?

For a sybaritic adventure holiday. nothing can beat the unblemished beaches of Neviot. But how long will we be able to visit this serene desert oasis? asks Harry Wall. Photos: Richard Nowitz.

Flower harvest in Moshav Neviot's gardens, and panoramic view of the moshav's melon fields (below) only distractions from watching a spectacula Sinai sunset are the European girls, who mak up a majority of the resort's employ, preferring the Sinai climate to Copenhar the winter.

Neviot can accommodate about 180 vist. at one time either in comfortable an conditioned rooms with private baths, or economy-style thatched bungalows. Meals a taken in the relaxed ambience of the reso dining room, and while the cuisine may not considered haute, it does satisfy a hear appetite.

Evening activities vary, depending upon the weekly schedule. It may consist of disc dancing, a piano bar, or watching second. films. Or, after a full day under the water travelling through the wadis, you may new to just relax at the bar where you can strike a new acquaintance and, if the company a new acquaintance and, it the company right, well... how time just flies. If you get the impression that this is a plas for people whose souls haven't fossilized that's correct. But neither does it have the satz chic aura of a Club Mediterramée. "We try to create a relaxed atmosph here where the guests can do what they want says Moshe Ron, the Israeli-born assist manager of the resort. Ron, who sports a pa of thick muttonchop sideburns and "Cockney" cap, does not look like the farme that he is. Like other members of the mosher he takes his turn working in the holida village, instead of the settlement's hothour brimming with flowers or melons bound f Europe.

Ron faces the dilemma of keeping the ream operating as usual, despite the three-year deadline imposed by the Camp David accord when it would have to be abandoned by the Israelis. "It'e a real shame," he says: " built comething beautiful here, when the was nothing before. And to have to give it is Egypt..." his voice trails off.

While the morale of the moshav memb has sunk since Camp David, the operation the holiday village is business as usual. "w had hoped to add 30 new rooms this year, h that's out now," says Ron. Although busine this season has been good, the moshay worried about the prospects during the trans tion period before Egypt takes control of th Sinai. "European travel agents are not su what to do about sending their clients her next year, because of the political situation We try to assure them that we will still b here, but they don't understand what's goin on.

The political turn of events has not had any apparent effect upon the number of divin enthusiasts coming to Neviot. "Last year w had 750 students who learned to dive here! states Bill Jackson, one of the instructors the diving centre. Twice monthly the Divin Centre offers seven-day courses for beginne The course includes lectures, slides and div in full scuba equipment. The centre also offen diving safaris every month to various site along the Red Sea coast.

"We haven't had one student hut a upperienced an accident in five years says opened here," says Jackson, an imminu from New Zealand, in allaying the fearant landlover. In order to take the diving course person under the age of 35 must present a o tificate of good health from his doctor, and he's over 35, an EKG exam as well "Diving is where the new action is in Sinal," says the instructor, explaining in

ONE OF THE consequences of the Camp David accords is a reawakening of interest in the Sinai. Thousands of Israeli tourists have been flocking to the desert peninsula since last September, when it was announced that the entire region would be returned to Egypt. Many of them are firet-time visitors, prompted by the concern that they may never have the opportunity to go there again.

Of course, if there is real peace with Egypt. there should be no reason why Israelis, like other foreigners, would not be able to travel freely through the peninsula.

Most of the visitors are lured by the magnificent, stark terrain and unblemished beaches that characterize the region. With its lofty peaks, high-walled wadis, and Red Sea coast teeming with coral life and colourful fish, the final has beckened those seeking outdoor adventure in the great desert frontier.

But those who want to combine their desert adventure with the sybaritic pleasures of resort luxury, can satisfy both yearnings at the Neviot Holiday Village.

The holiday village sits on a beautiful bay formed by the Gulf of Eilat, about an hour's drive down the two-lane road from Eilat. The whole area is a large desert oasis in a palmstudded delta that separates the desiccated Sinai mountain range from the crystal blue waters of the Gulf.

The holiday village is owned and operated by the nearby moshav of the same name. But don't make comparisons with the restained atmoephere of other eettlement-operated resorts in Israel. Neviot caters primarily to a young clientele including a large number of Europeans during the winter - whose idea of a good time is more than having someone else cook dinner for a change. And singles who want to get off the coffee and cake circuit for a while will find an inviting ambience at the holiday village.

Neviot offers, as they say, something for everyone. There's scuba diving, or snorkling for the less adventurous, at the diving centre, swimming, tennis, bic cling or sunbathing on the pristine beaches. (If you want a completely even tan, there's an enclosed area where you can bronze yourself in the buff.) For those who prefer their water sports above the surface, there's eailing, waterskiing and pleasure ridee in kayaka and motor boats.

A variety of outings are on the calendar of tours organized by the village. These may include a half-day tour to Ein Fortuga, the largest fresh-water oasis in the Southern Sinai, a full-day excursion to Santa Katerina (both in command cars with a knowledgeable guide), or a free glass-bottom boat tour and a glimpse at the wonder-world beneath the Red Sea surface. And for those who want a little anthropology with their vacation, visits can be arranged to the nearby Beduin villages and coffee with the shelkhs.

On the other hand, if your tastes are less athletic, there's always easy conversation and drinks at the Oasis Bar, a splendid patio deck fronting a grove of date palms and facing the barren hills of Saudia Arabia across the Gulf. Instead of money, plastic tokens, in the form of a chain bracelet, are used as currency. The ularity of the underwater sport. "And have the world," adds Jackson, who has proved mysteries of the ocean depths from the second depth depths from the second depth depths from the second depth Mauritius Islands to the Great Barrier off the coast of Australia. So long as the off and the fish are protected by the Nam Preservation Society, Jackson believes Red Sea will continue to attract diversion all over the world. "I have my doubt and the states of the states however, whether the reef will remain som preserved after Israel evacuates the he worrles.

Despite having been caught in a million maelstrom, Neviot remains a serene and paradise. Though they are novices in business, the farmers of Moshav lie in proven themselves adept at running with a "laid back" atmosphere. It more than a tinge of selfishness that is heaving this tunky desert cases. Is for pity it will be to have to give up such A thing after having just discovered I

Prices: Half pension (breakfast meal) per person per day complete diving course is ILS,362 per cluding hotel, half pension.

IF EVER another cooking course is given at Safad's Rimon Inn, the hotel management will have to buy an exhaust fan, for the eake of guests not taking the course.

When I gave a four-day course in Middle Eastern cooking as part of a Landci afts study holiday, residents of the rooms opposite the bar, where the cooking course was being held, reported that the smells drove them crazy. All they could think about was food.

The session was a pilot project for Landcrafts, a new ldca in holidaye, originated by a young social work lecturer from the U.S., Harry Stern. Geared for Israelis as well as foreign visitors, it is founded on tha Idea that many holiday-makers would prefer some creative activity.

Last year's coursee, in addition to cooking, included jewellery making, weaving and drawing. Workshope planned for the future are in batik. sculpture and copper etching. Par-ticlpants in workshops in the plastic arts enjoyed taking home the wall-hangings, earrings and drawings thay had made.

Cook's Course

Food Editor Haim Shapiro takes a working holiday

On the other hand, the cooking class participants had come advantages of their own, not the least of which was eating their own lessons every day. The only complaint? Some of the participants found themselves gaining weight. In contrast to the crafts instruc-tors, who were dealing entirely with beginners, I found a wide range of cooking knowledge, from those who were quite well-versed in kitchen lore to those who knew hardly anything about the euhject. This had the advantage of transforming what might have been a class into a truc workshop in which the members each contributed their own knowledge.

I did feel a little guilty about keeping the participants cooped up much of the day cooking, when they had an of Safad to enjoy. True, at least one of the evenings was spent in an im-promptu tour of the artists' quarter, hut I felt, perhaps mistakenly, that people on holiday want to have some time to rest, swim, elt in the sun and just wander about.

My recommendations for future courses included the proviso that participants, not to speak of the leaders, need come time off. Our biggest excursion, I'm afraid, was to the hotel garden to pick rosemary for a dish of etewed lamh and string beans.

Others secmed to make far more use of the surroundings. The drawing group was outside with their pencils and pads regularly and even the jewellery-making group went on a search for local rocks which they could incorporate into their creations.

But even with participants cooking to escape the pleasures of the Rimon Inn, one of the country's most unique hotels. Built on the site of the old Turkish Post Office, it has only 36 rooms, each of them special. Some of the rooms have little alcoves, others private halconies or terraccs and most have magnificent views of the hills of Upper Galilae. The eame view is also visible through the plcture window that frames one end of the vaulted dining room. Incidentally, the wails of thie room still have the stone loops on which travellers once tethered their horses, camels and donkeys.

It was in the kitchen adjoining the dining room that I had one of the most pleasant surpriece of the course. Hotel chefs are very fussy about their domain and I had expected the kitchen staff to be antagonistic. or at hest, indifferent, to the activitles of a cooking course practically under their noses.

Instead, we were shown the utmost courtesy and cooperation. Platters. pots and even that most closely guarded 'nstrument, the kitchen knife. were freely offered when needed. We also had occasional visits by the kltchen staff.

There were also visits hy the memhers of the other study groups. These ranged from the curious to one vieltor who was outright antagonistic. The latter was the wife of an elderly man who had previously had no experience in the kitchen. "Do you really think you can teach him to cook?" she would ask. "I don't believe it. He'll never be able to boil an egg." While the banter was humorous in tone, it did reflect the uncertainty often faced hy elderly couples on the verge of retirement. The husband, faced with a eudden excess of leisure was ready to invade his wifc's kitchen and she, although she voic-ed her objections jokingly, was, clearly not interested in a partner and possible competitor in her realm.

The problems of retirement also explained why many, although cer-tainly not all, the participants in the course were retirees. On the one hand, they were free to seek out new ways to occupy their time. On the other hand, the hectic tours about the country to which most tourists are subjected are not for them.

At the same fine there are m Israelis who view a holiday something more than sitting of beach or eating as much fool possible. For them too, the chan learn a craft in luxury surro is a welcome one. It is also and tunity for those who do e stimulating holiday, to ment with like interests.

On vacation in Israel

aven of Rest fier you are a health food nut, or just want peace xation, Mostaw Aminim is ideal, Str. Phyllis Glazer.

MOSHAV AMIRIM is a vegetarianvegan vacation village located high up in the Galil just out of Safad. The view is hresthtaking. The winding paths are lined with caroh, fig, quince and pomegranate trees. The people live as they eat - simply and heautifully, amidst some of the most heautiful panorama in all of Israel. If there was indeed a Garden of Eden, it could not have been far away.

JAIL on Lisa

There's more than one way to get to Moshav Amirim. If the car of your dreams ts still a figment of your imagination, there's always the bus that leaves you off at the bottom of the hill from which it's just a short walk or prc-arranged ride up to the vlilage proper.

There's more than one reason to go. Some go for R & R - rest and relaxation - which considering the iocation is aimost mandatory. Some go to lose weight. Some go to get to know the countryside, especially as a stopover on their way up north. I went to learn about vegstarianism. The moshay has been around some 20 years, started by Europeans who came there to start a vegetarianvegan community out in the countryside, and who wers joined hy Sephardim who were pisced there hy the Jewish Agency. The Sephardim are not vegetarian, and so unfortunately are not welcomed by the community at large. At present, few Sephardic families remain, and the tension that exists between the two factions is the only thing that mars the traoquillity of the place.

About 50 families are memoers of Amirim today, and they are sincere believers in the phyelcal and spiritual benefits of vegetarianism (their beautiful skins and healthy constitutions mean they must be doing something right). Most of the fruits and vegetables they eat are organically grown and in their own fields - and their produce is also sent to various health food stores around the country. Other necessities euch as grains, nuts, seeds and dairy products are brought in from the outside and coid at a little general store in the village. There are varying degrees of strictness among the members, from those who consume nothing but raw fruits and vegetahies, to those whose diet includes everything hut meat and fish. Those of the vegan persuasioo consume no dairy producte.

Many families have their own vegetable gardens, where they grow herbs for cooking, teas and medicinal purposes. They do not helieve in using vitamins or other pills or chemicals, and most are hap-py to share their knowledge, philosophy and sometimes even their herhs with you.

The plan for visitors is as follows: Several of the families have gusst cabins with a varying number of beds, and some are equipped with a hot plate, dishes and cutlery, table and chairs, radio, refrigerator and a delightful view. You may rent either just the room (300 lire per day per souple), room and full board (800 lire groups are not usually so involved with intellectual and theological matters. But the church groups? Remember that only the moet serious of the Christians make the effort to come to Israei. For them the Scripture is very important indeed, and their seriousness of purpose is often amazing: The guide must eetahlish his authority and do so without coming into head-long conflict with the group or especially with the group leader.

Guiding is not only an art, it's a craft. A professional guide knows his craft. Don't imagine that the problems of the guide are just historical and theological. In reality, these are almost marginal. The group must he fed and lodged. They havs to get out of the hotel at a certain time in the morning. They have to drink something along the way. and use the hathroom, Lunch is an enormous prohiem: how many places do you think there are in the country where you can feed 40 people in tolerahly clean surroundings, with acceptable rest rooms and food they won't get poisoned hy? The guide has to he reeponsible for organizing transfer of luggage, heing sure hotel hills are paid and keys collected, arranging evening programmes. You can be a genius in history and archaeology, but if you can't keep a group moving smoothly, efficiently, well fed, well oiled, with enough time to take pictures, huy postcards and souvenirs and go to the hathroom, you'li have a rebellious group on your hands. I know why it took the children of Iarael 40 years to get from Egypt to Canaan; groupe move slowly!

The third part of the tourist equation is the travel agent. It'e the agent who organizes the group, who per day per couplei with the family with which you are staying, partial board with the family with which you are staying, one meal a day with another family, etc. (Prices are subject to change after Pesach.)

The Lamdanis are vegans and are among the founders. Yaffa and her hushand are vegetarians, and she is especially warm and willing to share her knowledge and recipes. Dalla is a less strict vegetarian and a gourmet cook. Anat ie a registered nurse and she and her hushand, both vegans, have built one of the most heauttfui guest houces on the Moshav. Me'era's vineyard shouid not be missed. Slowly, through the years, each family develops its own clienteie with guests that return to them year after year. Wherever you eat the food is so good that even the most diehard meateaters come away satisfied.

About the only thing that the moshav doeen't have is organized activities. In the warmer months, the swimming pool is open and nature walks are sometimes available (particularly if you can Convince Mr. Lamdani to take you). In the evening there is an occasional film or lecture. Some people go into oearhy Safad. Best to hring a good book. some writing paper, walking shoes and your camera and settie back for a relaxing and peacefully rewarding time.

ing that someone sat in the office in New York with a huge map of the world - a Mercator projection, of course, that makes Canada aod Greenland huge and Israel harely, visible. What's the problem then to whip up a tourist hrochure promising just that little hit more than tha competition offers? We leave Tel Aviv in the morning, visit Megiddo. Caesarea, Haifa and Acre. Have lunch en route, then go to Safad, the Golan and the holy places on the Sea of Galilee before arriving at our hotel in Tiberias. Sure, why not? Look how small Israel is on the map? Well, just try to do that with a bus full of 40 people.

But that's what the agent sold them, and that's what the people bought. They'll sue you if you skip anything! So the guide is stuck; his only choice is to turn down the job, in which case someone else will be found to do it, somebody less fussy ! An agent who is more enthusiastic than responsible can screw up his people for good. A pilgrimage can become a nightmare of long-distance driving and 20-minute stops.

So the agent, working under his own pressures, has to solve his, prohlems. He may only be the local agent of the one who sold the tour inthe first place, or he may not be able. to find the hotels, or the guides, he, would like to find. He's got they responsibility, and it's his money to-

It's such a familiar sight. Here comes the great hig shiny tourist hus. The people are off to see the sights. But if the group works, if the tour functions as intelligently and smoothly as it should, it's due to such a variety of talents, interests and abilities clicking smoothly into place # that on the face of things it's a wonder groups work well at all. But that's the challenge of the tourist industry; every group is completely new, every stage must be repeated each time, and everyhody who deals . with the tourist must learn his craft anew every time a new group comes. It can be an exhausting, as well as an exhllarating experience.

It seems fairly clear that the least eatlefactory way to go ie the "Regular Tour," one day Massada, three Days Galilee, etc. The people are not going to know each other, or care, and the recults are mechanical.

A second factor is whether the people in the group like each other. Second factor: the guides. But but there are certainly plenty of years of history, Old Testament and New, Christian, Jewish and Moslem, ancient and modern Israel, the footsteps of Jesus and the rehirth of the Yishuv, the tribes of Israel, the government's policy on settlement and Palestine Arab nationaliem. Despite the important differences hetween Jewteh and Christlan groups (it's a caricature, hut I'll chance it anyhow, that the Christians came to eee where Jesus went and the Jewe came to see where their money went) - both groups depend on the guide. In every place we go the hurden is upon us to ebow, explain, demonstrete, argue, present, clarify. What went on here? Why? How? When? Why here and not somewhere else? It's an extraordinary responsibility, truly. In many tours, "If whi turn out that the only live Israelis the group will ever meet. are the guide, busdriver, and hotel people. And if all these "Israelis" are from East Jerusalem?

The dependence on the guide is not only intellectual; it soon hecomes emotional. Jewe or Christians, they're here on some kind of pilgrimage. It may he for different reasons and in different contexts, hut it's still a pilgrimege. And its success depends on the guide. Ze'ev Kedem has just completed his second documentary film on a subject about which he feels strongly, the Old City of Jerusalem. "The Jerusalem Quartet" is about the four communities which occupy distinctive quartere inside the ancient walls - the Armenians, the Christians, the Moslems and the Jews. From his interviews, Kedem discovered that tremendous warmth once existed between some Jews and Moslems who may have shared the same courtyards and same op-pressions from the government authorities. He even discovered an old Moslem family where the mother is Jewish. Though she lives like all her neighbours and bas brought ber children up as Mosiems, she still maintains kashrut and never eats outside her bome. What is even more amazing, this has been accepted by her family and neighbours for over 50 years, and she is respected for her beliefs.

NEVERTHELESS the hypothesis so deaired by liberal elements that cooperation and mutual regard characterize relations inside the Old City just hasn't been verified by Kedem's research.

"Each community is busy with its own concerns. Their energies are primarily inner-directed. There can be tolerance, but not necessarily acceptance," be pronounces sadiy. It was not sociological or philosophical Ideas which got Kedem Interested 1n making "The Jerusalem Quartet." He admits be simply wanted to know more about his personal surroundings and the

Using the new skills acquired as coordinator, Kedem took possession of one of the ruins on the edge of the Armenian Quarter and restored a house of outstanding beauty and originality for his family. This step started him on his third career and Kedem was soon building some of the more interesting houses of Jerusalem for private cliants.

FILME offered a fresb outlet for Kedem's effarvescent spirit. Concentrating on a romantic tale about the house next door, be drew up the outlines for a documentary movie which concerned Jewish roots in the Holy City. The director of the Dutch Evangelical Network, a man with deep emotional ties to Israel, agreed to sponsor Kedem's film. "It was an act of pure faith," the enthusiastic producer recalls bapplly. "I knew notbing about the medium and bad absolutely no previous experience. But we hit it off from the beginning and my basic approach to the subject must have been right." The film, called "Only in Jerusalem" was a success, despite its low budget and lack of professional staff.

WITH THIS success, Kedem im-mediately embarked on his second, more ambitious venture, now nearing completion. Again his Dutch sponsor acted as the ministering angel, but now American and European backers are willing to risk capital in Kedem's "cultural adven-

A GREEN THUMB fever has swept the country io the last three years. making gardening one of our most popular pastimes. Today you have to wait to get served in overcrowded nurseries, as sales of seed, plants, flower pots and lertilizer shoot up. What are the reasons for this "green revolution"? Why have so many people developed a green thumh? The answers can be found in the different approaches to gardening: love of colour and fragrance; a taste for fresh fruits and vegetables; a desire to cut the food budgst; and the intangible satisfaction of gardening. Who knows the value of heing able to say ''I grew it myself"?

say "I grew it myself"? Working with living plants and seeing them respond bas a therapeutic value. Success in isar-ning something new and using new skills stirs a sense of pride and achievement. And the exercise can he relaxing, even recreational.

Home gardening can be a isarning experience for the antire family, including the children. What better way to teach them hiology? Aesthetic values are also involved in gardening - in landscaping and in producing variety and colour in the different seasons of the year.

There is also a social value to gardening. In urban areas neighbours often do not really get acquainted. But if both you and your neighbour have a gerden, you will have much in common to talk about to nurture the neighbourliness so important to any community.

Philosophy aside, now let us turn to the work to be done in the second half of March.

Lawns. If you have not fed your lawn recently, you can still do It now, and this is especially appropriate if the grass is still dormant. First, try to rid your lawn of all lis weeds.

Then rake the lawn strongly several times and in all directions. Plunge your garden fork into the ground to make air boles for roots. Now cover the lawn area with a layer 1.2 cm. deep of red soll or sieved compost. A light addition of fertilizer — ammonia sulphate, urea or '20-20-20" - is beneficial.

Herbs. Plant garlic in March. Pythagoras called this member of the onion family "the king of herbs." Egyptians, Gresks and Romans grew it as a field crop. In India, China and Japan, garlic has been long prized as a medicine. Its relatives in the allium family include shallots, chives and leeks. These are often difficult to obtain here, but garlic is popularly grown at bome. Immigrants from oriental countries have kept the custom of growing garlic in all kinds of containers

Rows should be not less than 50 cm. apart. Harvest new garlic heads when the leaves of the plants have become dry and vellow.

Vegetables: This year's mild winter and early epring mean that we can grow some summer plants earlier than usual. There may yet be a night frost but by the end of March, you can start, with snmmer vegetables such as lima beans. These beans have been cultivated since prehistoric times in the Americas. The North American Indians grew a small-sized lima bean, but the Incas in Peru developed a much larger variety and from this speciee came the bean we know today, named in honour of the Peruvian capital.

The scientific name for both kinds of bean is Phaseolus lunatus. In Hebrew, we call tham shouset lima. Unlike gresn or ysllow (wax) beans, only the ripe sseds are used in cooking; the pods are discarded. Lima beans ricb in vitamins itbiamine and rlboflavin) and minerals (phosphorus and iron), are one of the most nutritioue of vegetables.

They grow well in light, sandy soil (add sand or vermiculite if your soll is too heavy). Dig tranches 8-4 cm. deep and 50-60 cms. apart and sow Celosla(or Zriat hashual 10 Hebrew) likes sun and produces plumes in rich red, yellow, orange and purple. Grows 40-80 cm. high. Uac as cutflower, especially in decorative arrangements.

Petunias come in many colours but mostly red or purple varieties are seen in seed shops. This fragrant flower is suitable as a border flowar or for containers and hanging baskets. Agathaea (or felicia) is a small shrub with blue daisy-like flowere with yeliow centres. It sometimes lasts longer than one season. It grows 30-40 cm. high and blooms for a long time. Suitable for sunny locations or light shade.

Zinnia flowere in all colours and is a plant for full sun, growing 40-50 cm. high. Its hollow stems break easily (need staking) , and so it is not suitable as a cut flower but most decorative in a sunny garden.

IN THE COASTAL PLAIN you may have seen a decorative shrub with extraordinary leaves that turn scarlet red in late autumn. This is the poinsettla (also called the euphorbia pulcherrima) and is named in honour of Joel Poinsett, who while serving as U.S. minister to Mexico discovered the plant there in 1828. This interesting plant travelled to America, Europe and then to bere. In this country's hilly regions, it can only survive in a garden protected from wind, near a wall or fence.

Ageratum mexicanum is most suitable for hedges. It grows 15-25 cm. high and flowers in hiuish The true flowers of the poinsettia form a greyish cluster and often go unnoticed. The presentation will be made by Mr. Julius Kushner of Brooklyn, New York. The Centre was established seven years ago by David Zucker of Great Neck, New York and Morris Spiezman of Charlotte, North Carolina, and bas since become a focal poinf for religious, cuitural and social activities. It attracts both the local residents , and visitors from abroad. Situated in the heart of the capital's botel helt, it is an easy place for tourists to find, and there is not a single Shabbat or festival in which gugete from overseas are not among the congregation. The Centre is a dynamic bub of activity with daily adult education classes, special boliday seminars, the traditional Lag B'Omer Weskend, fbe monthly Havura, weekiy.lecture-discussions on current events in Israel and the Jewish world at large, art exhibitions and musical events. In addition to thess programmes, the Centre also participates in the volunteer welfare work of many organizations and institutions. Last summer, the Youth Department adopted war orphans, and made it possible for them to participate in the USY Piigrimage. The Women'e League group raises considerable funds to facilitate attendance af the Day Camp by children from socially and economically deprived backgrounds. The Day Camp is under the joint sponsorship of the Centre and the Ramah Programmes in Israei. In Jerusalem, the Women's League has adopted special projects for the blind, and participates in a volunteer programme of the Israel Defance Forces. Great emphasis is placed on the educating of youth. In addition to serving as a home for United Synagogue Youth pilgrimages and conducting its own weekly USY groups, the Centre staff, together with the USY organization abroad, sponsored and directed the first successful five-month USY kibhutz ulpan at Kibbutz Ein Zurim.

Aliya and immigrant absorption are also vital facets of the Centre's work, and a special department has been sef up as a resource facility for anyone contemplating aliya, a study semester or a Sabbatical in Israel.

Noting that the Centre is approaching its first decade, Director Dr. Pesach Schindler recalls the uncertainfy of ifs beginnings. "There were people who didn't think we'd last a ysar," be eays. We're a true test case. We no longer have to speak of roots or setting up a foundation. We're building on fertils ground." Dr. Schindier smphasises that the programme at the Centre "is not meant to detract or compete with other forms of legitimate Jewish commitment, but rather to mest the real needs of so many Jews who have made their homs in Israel, and who see it not merely as a Jewisb State, but a State for Jews." He explains that people looking for their own individual Jewish expression are delighted to find a freedom of choice in a political State. "This is where we coms in," be says. "We serve the needs of people looking for Jewisb meaning in their lives. In this respect, piuralism is not a iuxury, but an absolute necessity. There is an inherent need to fill a epiritual vacuum, and the response cannot be monolithic." Dr. Schindler is not an advocate of the currently fashionable "roots" concept, "Wc don't have to concern ourseives with roots," he says, "but with branches. We have to grow and blossom. History is very cruel to movements which have nothing to say at a given time. The continuing growth of our movement demonstrates that we do have something to say, and that there are many who are eager to listen."

First intern'l numismatic conference here Numismatics, where 1ag can be worth $20,000

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Jerusalem International Numismatic Meeting 1979, the first of its type to be held here, opened its doors to the general public yesterday. The four day mseting at Binyenei Ha'ooma faaturee an international educational forum, an Israeli collectore' symposium, audio-visual pressntations, exhibits and a dealers' coin exchange.

"Jimmy Carter's presence in Jerusalem has added much ezcitement to our convention," stated Arnold H. Kagan, preeldent of the American-Israel Numlsmatic Association (AINA), and curator of the Kagan-Maremba collection. The collection is the largest and most comprehensive Israal coin display in world and is displayed at the the meeting. It is valued at more than $1m.

Adding more sparkle to the meeting are various coin exhibits hrought over from ths U.S. "We held a competition among AINA's members and chose the best from the approximately 200 collections which participated in the contest," explains Kagan.

The Jerusalem International Numismatic Meeting (JINM) as well as AINA will award prizes to collections chosen by a panel of judges. The A.H. Kagan trophy will also be awarded. The winner will kesp the trophy until the next convention and then will have it replaced by a smaller, permanent one. The presence of 15 dealers from Israel and abroad is doubtiess giving a major boost to the whole field of numismatics here. Some 120 numismatists from abroad had registered prior to the opening.

The list of overseas dealers includes some of the major names in the husiness.

England is represented by B.A. Seaby Ltd., of London. "My wife is participating in this meeting,

"The market for modern Israeli coins is relatively small in England; however, it has probably not yet been fully tappsd," pointed out Peter Seaby. Coin collecting has in recent years become a major object of investment. Seaby advises anyone intending to invest in coins to seek professional advice first. He suggests that only good quality coins should be purchased and that they should be held for at least four to five years to gain in value.

Seaby currently serves as preeldent of the International Association of Professional Numismatists, a group of senior dealers numbering some 100 members from all parts of the world.

The American dealer contingent includes J.J. Van Grover, Jonah R. Shapiro, Carl and Andrew Rosenblum, and Claud Amsellem. Van Grover, hesides specializing in Ieraeli coins and medals, has developed a highly attractive line of pendants based on cut-outs of Israeli medals. These pendants are created by cutting out the lettsring of a coin or medal - creating a piece of jewelry Besides Seahy, England is represented by Vincenzi of Colcheeter. Theodore Rieger of Cologne rounds out the overseas dealer contingent.

The Israeli coin dealer community is represented by such well-known names as Naim Basson, the Tel Aviv Coins and Medals Distribution Co., Emanograph Israel Ltd., M. Friedmann, Lelh Hatsernov, Yair Nachmany, Haim Sasha and Yosef Meroz.

The most impressive display of the numismatic meeting is the Kagan-Maremba coin collection. The collection, when arranged in one continuous row, measures no less than 180 feet. It is displayed in special panels, each representing a page of the Kagan catalogue.

The novelty of the panels is their special design, which allows each item to be viewed from both sides. The collection includes such rarities as Israel's rarest set, Type I, II, and III of the eight-grain one-agora coin. The six-coin set is s currently valued at $65,000.

The JINM is assured of getting international press coverage. Among the attendees is David Alexander of the American Coin World, and Albert Beck, editor-in-chief of the influential "Muenzen Review." Moonlighting no bar to prize winning Histadrut awards 18 labour prizes

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT Jerusalem Post Reporter

The works committee of the Tel Aviv municipality, which in the past has attacked Mayor Shlomo Lahat for hiring private detectives to expose moonlighting employses, yesterday received a Histadrut prize for "responsibility and competence in advancing workers' rights."

The committee was among 18 recipients of the "Labour Prize" at a ceremony at the Tel Aviv Museum. Labour and Social Affairs Minister Israel Katz, Histadrut secretary-general Yeroham Meshsl, and Mayor Lahat attended the ceremony, at which IL12,000 was awarded to each of the nine prize winning groups and ILS,000 in each of the nine individual winners.

The works committee at Tel Aviv municipality, which is dominated hy the Labour Party, had frequently opposed Mayor Lahat, of the Likud.

In 1975, for example, it criticised Labat for engaging detectives in "pry into the private affairs of municipal employees." The detectives reported that two employees were in the habit of leaving the city hall avery morning promptly after punching the time clock — one to sell insurance and the other to operate a Toto football poll ticket station. Histadrut headquarters backed the stand of the works committees.

In explaining the reason for the award, the Histadrut said that ths committee isadars represented the 13,000 employees in "an exemplary manner." They advanced the They advanced the workers' interests "without recourse to eanctions and strikes" and developed cultural activities.

Histadrut spokesman Shmuel Soler told The Post that no political considerations were involved in the choica of winners. "There is an objective committee," he added. Other recipients were:

Prise Market unenthusiastic about Carter visit

Money Matters

The shars market reflected very little entbusiasm over U.S. President Jimmy Carter's visit to Jerusalem. With the exception of the commercial bank sector, which stayed steady, all other groups turned lower in moderately active trading. Some 16 months ago, when an atmosphere of general suphoria accompanied the arrival of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to Jerusalem. the share market also turned lower. In fact, it marked the last chapter of the historic "bull market" that ended in the December 15, 1973 Israeli version of Wall Street's Crash of 1929. Parallels are hard to draw since the market ita. conditions are now far different from what they were at that time.

u Otna Yan So far this year the equity segment of the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange has barely been able to maintain the inflationary spiral and now appears to be very sensitive to anything that may be considered as sensitive political or economic news. The behaviour of the local share market stands in stark centrast to recent events on Wall Street where share prices moved up smartly last week on expectation of ocial aid the the signing of a peacs treaty between Israel the Anto and Egypt.

Stocks & bondsthe market report

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN Post Finance Reporter

While shares moved lower, index-linked bonds moved ahead. Prices were higher by as much as one and a half per cent. In share trading the three majer commercial banks traded unchanged. The same was true of Mizrahi but Unice Bank was dewn by five to 395. Israel General gained one point as was the case with FIBL

The downward movement was (slt with the beginning ef trading in mortgage bank issues. Carmel was down by about 6.0 per ceet to 374. Others in the group showed minor losses. Tefahot (B) moved against the trend and gained six te 366.

Insurance issues were also predeminantly lower. Arych slipped by 15 and Hassneh by 11.

Taking risks for peace

THE ROAD in peace in the Middle East has been lined, especially since November 1977, with what the media phrase-makers dubbed critical junctures: Jerusalem, Ismailiya, Leeds, Camp David I, Blair House, Camp David II. Not all proved to be successes, but all contributed to the peace process. For all their significance, hnwever, none of these turning points deserved so dramatic a description.

President Carter's current visit to Egypt and Israei, on the other hand, most certainly does.

For the past 15 months it cnuld — and in fact has been argued with a measure of justice that haste should be made if not slowly then deliberately in the quest for peace; that the matters under discussion were too weighty to be disposed m with a sleight of hand. The edifice of peace would not endure if built upon shaky foundations - and the future of the nation depended on their strength.

Therefore, better that a final peace cettlement, which had sluded the area so long, should wait a while ionger at the door. The result would then only be better.

This reasoning cannot apply to the mission undertaken by Mr. Carter last week. If this mission fails, it would not merely be recorded as another bonourable try: no the contrary, it would most likely signal the total collapse of the entire peace effort, with all its horrendous consequences. From such ruins, it would be idle tn expect a fresh start towards peace — any time soon, at the very least.

It may be assumed that the cabinet, at its meeting that ended early this morning, was not unaware of this dread possibility. It may also be assumed that the cabinet was not at all happy about being asked by the U.S. Preeldent tn shoulder the major share nf responsibility for lt.

This is perfectly understandable. Since the peace talks began, this country, under a supposedly hawkish regime, bas made cnncessinns — not only to Egypt directly, but to the Arab side as a whole - which, in retrospect, might appear impossible: the cession of the entire peninsula of Sinal back to Egypt, the recognition of the rights of the Palestinians, the establishment of a transitional autonomy for the Arabs of Judea, Samaria and Gaza.

In exchange, Israel received the pledge of peaceful normalcy - but without any undertaking that this commitment would formally override Egypt's obligation to join other Arab states in an attack upon Israel, under the terms of the Arab League's socalled defence pact.

At his meeting with Mr. Carter last month Mr. Begin is reported to have given up on the demand, already enshrined in the Blair House draft treaty, for a clear priority of Egypt's undertaking to Israel. He was assured that, as far as Mr. Carter was concerned, the concessions he had made then and there would be the last.

Now it appears that Mr. Sadat is not satisfied with that compromise arrangement, and insists upon some revisions. Mr. Carter is bere now with his aides to plead Mr. Sadat's case before Mr. Begin and his cabinet.

The argument is not so much that the latest Egyptian demands are necessarily fair (although Israel, for its part, has rejected deals made by the U.S. and Egypt), or just (although the revisions sought admittedly fall outside the Camp David framework), or trifling (even though they are liable to seem so to American eyes).

Rather the argument is that acceptance of the Egyptian demands is practically necessary to save President Sadat and the prospect of peace - from the hands of the Rejectionists.

What should Israel's reaction be? Should not Israel retort that the danger of Arab opposition must have been taken into account by Mr. Sadat when he embarked on bis historic voyage to Jerusalem? Perhaps so. But on second thought it must be conceded that the Egyptian President obviously erred in his estimate of the strength of his Arab foes. He saw himself swimming with a powerful tide; he now finds the tide running against him - and it is the same tide that is running against Israel as well. Not being privy to information about the precise nature of the "serious problems" that, as Mr. Begin put it to Mr. Carter at the Knesset reception last night, still need to be resolved, we will not venture to suggest how they ought to be settled. This working principle we do, bowever, propose: that, in present conditions, it would be an acceptable rick for Israel to endorse such final revisions of the draft treaty and its attendant texts as do not tend to undermine the country's security, either by their own nature or by dint of U.S. underwriting. The alternative would be an unacceptable gamble with the security and welfare of the nation.

RUMOURS of a future American naval base in Haifa, or a U.S. air hase in Sinai, and speculation on who suggested what to whom nead not be dealt with now, for they flow from dellberate leaks deelgned to pressure the negotiating parties or to mislead the public. It is significant, however, that such rumours bave provokad widespread commentary by Isreali politicians and journalists, mostly to the effect that a U.S.-Israel defence treaty would be an un-mitigated disaster for Israel. These comments do deserve an immediata answer, because if we are unwilling to take the idea of a treaty seriously, we shall never progress to the point of discussing exactly what kind of treaty we need, in terms of our security requirements.

There are two main arguments against a defence treaty: first, that the thing is unreliable, and second, that even if it could make us more secure, it would limit our freedom of action

Oddly enough, these two sorts of arguments are not antirely compatible, for if a treaty is unreliable we would lose nothing by acting as we please. But since not every critic expounds both points eizultaneously, although many do, it is necessary o consider the two eeparately. The notion that American treaties are unreliable is based on ignorance of American history and the con-stitutional force of such treatles, as opposed to mere presidential letters and promises.

In this regard, the critics have yet to offer even one example of a treaty which Washington failed to observe fully according to the letter of lis provisions. They speak vaguely about Viatnam, Taiwan, and Iran, where American support was either phased out or not forthcoming. But in all of these places, circumstances were bardly analagous with the situation in Israel today.

There is concern, for example, with America's failure to persevere in Vietnam. But critice of a defence treaty neglect the fact that America was willing to stick it out in Vietnam for a full decade, whereas our wars last only a month or less. And not only did the Americans fight in South Vietnam for 10 years, they also prov-ed willing to spend over $100b. there,

Sir. - As a witness to the confrontation between student factions at the Hebrew University's Wise Auditorium on February 14, I wisb to bring to your attention a distressing fact that received elight coverage in your newspaper.

As a result of heckling by a coneiderable number of students, M.K. Uri Avnerl was prevented from speaking. It was obvious from the start that, unless a major police force was brought in to remove the hecklers, there was no point in continuing the meeting.

Most importantly, bowever, paesione ran high in the full auditorium and it seemed to be on the verge of erupting in violence since the heckiers, aroused by the university'e refusal to permit Meir Kahane to speak on the campus, confronted a group of left wingers which included a number of newly-militant Arab students.

and which must include at least a guarantee of help against Russian

Israel'e future withdrawals can be predicated, and it is the latter two which seem particularly troublesome. Arguments relating to cossible constraints concern both

PLO terrorist activities and military

On the first score, it is worthwhile placing the problem of the PLO in proper perspective. In the last 15 years, we have lost approximately 50 people each year in terrorist attacks.

Viewed in this light, the PLO is a distinct danger to our lives but not a

which is considerably more than the the U.S. signs a treaty with Israel, the agreement will be reliable. But what of the arguments that such a military and economic aid re-quirements of Israel. treaty would limit our freedom to act

Indead, the real reason wby America left Vietnam was that it received so little help locally. This would not be the case in Israel, where the Israel Defence Force is ready to act whenever necessary.

WHAT ABOUT Taiwan? Critics say that America withdrew support from Taiwan virtually overnight. Once again, though, the analogy is false. America signed a mutual defence treaty with Nationalist China in 1954. The treaty was observed scrupulousfor 24 years, and as a result Taiwan avoided war during that time. When America did cancel the treaty, President Carter acted in accordance with its terms, which permit either party to give a year'e notice of bis new intention. If anything, the Taiwan case indicates that Israel should negotiate a treaty that specifically providee for cancellation only by the Senate, which would be less likely than a president to take such a step. More positively, the same case also reveals that the Taiwan treaty lasted for 25 years, a period of peace that we sorely need and could use to build up our country until it might stand alone economically and militarily. Where is there reason for believing that the Iranian case bears upon our own? America was committed to protecting Iran from outside aggression, which did not take place. After Vietnam, the Americans were wary of getting trapped again in a civil war. Now, clearly, our security problem does not at all resemble that which the shah confronted.

untrustworthy, or that American officials would in critical moments interpret it so narrowly as to limit our action unwisely.

After the Holocaust and five Middie Eastern wars, Israeli suspicions are certainiy not imaginary. Nonetheless, they can be excessiva, because varying circumstances can induce different countries to act more or less faithfully. In the case of America's support for Israel, there is a paradox which prevents it from proclaiming just how concerned it is for our future.

IN TRUTH, America has a longterm etrategic interest in main-taining our national existence in this region, close to anti-American acregion, close to anti-American ac-tivities in the Arab world, and in maintaining our potential as an American staging base which might be used in operations against instability and fickleness on the part of various Arab governments. But since the U.S. does occasionally benefit from good working relations with those same governments — from military dictatorships to feudal oligarchies to Islamic extremists — no responsible American official will express his country's real need for Israel so clearly as to insult ber sometime partners in the rest of the area.

And eo we are treated to occasional references to "the historic ties" which bind our two countries, which surely exist but are certainly less than the whole story. Such talk does not inspire confidence, but it is time to look beyond words and concede that if there were no long-range American interest here, Washington would not have contributed over $10b. to Israel'e security since the Yom Kippur War.

Silence may necessarily continue. But American cenators are not naive, and they will not commit America's power and prestige to a treaty'e formal obligations unless a vital interest is plainly perceived. In this sense, the very creation of a treaty would be a compelling sign of its reliability.
